

Consider Harford First

Looking for an affordable start to your four-year degree?
Consider Harford Community College first.

HCC offers a quality education that is convenient and affordable. HCC students pay only 1/3 of the cost of their education at the College; the balance is subsidized by county and state funding. Harford offers small classes, well-equipped facilities, and faculty who are expert in their field, like Kenneth Jones, Associate Professor of Art.

Prof. Jones earned a B.A. and M.F.A. from the University of Delaware. He previously worked as a photographer, and has taught at UD, Rutgers University, Delaware College of Art + Design, Delaware County Community College, and the Art Studio of Delaware.

"What's important to me is helping others to learn – I've found that I also learn new things," said Jones, who teaches digital arts at HCC. He enjoys teaching at Harford because students are likely to be lifetime learners from a diverse population who are taking courses for personal enrichment.

"Here, students enter the classroom with different skill levels, and are really honest about what they know and don't know. This intensifies the learning experience for everyone."

Jones, who has exhibited work since 1986 throughout the U.S. and abroad, has received numerous honors. He was most recently awarded a 2006 Established Artist Fellowship in Visual Arts from the Delaware State Arts Council, Division of the Arts.

Hobbies include coaching baseball, playing the piano and guitar, and composing music.
